++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Southwest, mild and damp. Northeast, risk of ice and snow.

This Evening and Tonight:
Some southwestern areas of England and Wales cloudy with occasional rain and mild - these wetter conditions reaching Northern Ireland later. Most northern and eastern areas clear with a sharp frost, the odd wintry shower towards northeast Scotland, especially Shetland.

Wednesday:
Rain in southwestern and western areas moving northeastwards, with possible ice and snow as it encounters cold air across northern England and Scotland. Some southwestern areas drier and milder.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Remaining unsettled with areas of rain and snow pushing east, snow mostly confined to the hills. Rather cold in eastern areas, with night frost, but often milder in the west.
